Gainer Receives 2014 NASC President's Award

Lexington, KY – March 17, 2014 – West Virginia State Auditor Glen B. Gainer III was recently honored with a President's Award from the National Association of State Comptrollers (NASC). The award was given by NASC President and Nevada State Controller Kim Wallin on Wednesday, March 12. It was presented at a dinner held at the Nevada governor's mansion as part of the 2014 NASC Annual Conference, which was held in Reno, Nevada.

The President's Award is given each year by the president of NASC to recognize exceptional leadership and service to the association.

Auditor Gainer was honored with the award to recognize his longstanding support of NASC and its members. He has been involved with NASC since first being elected as West Virginia's state auditor in 1992. During that time he has been an active and staunch supporter of NASC and his fellow state comptrollers. He is a past president of NASC, having served as the organization's leader in 2003-04. Throughout his career he has actively promoted excellence in government.

"Glen has been such an important leader among his peers in NASC. He has been a steady presence since first being elected in 1992. He can always be counted on to share his expertise and knowledge with other state leaders," commented NASC President Kim Wallin. "I am pleased to recognize him with a President's Award to salute a career of hard work to benefit the citizens of his state, other members of NASC, and the broader government financial management community."

"Glen is well-deserving of this award," said Kinney Poynter, executive director of NASC's parent organization, the National Association of State Auditors, Comptrollers and Treasurers (NASACT). "He is a strong supporter of both NASC and NASACT, and he embodies our goals of ensuring the highest levels of government transparency, accountability and integrity.”
